Subject: Microsoft Settlement

Hello

As a tech manager for a school system, I object to the proposed settlement of the Microsoft anti-trust case. It would seem to me that this settlement benefits Microsoft and harms its competitors. It would be better if Microsoft simply gave money or credits to schools that could be spent on any company's products. Schools could then decide what is best for them. If Microsoft gives the schools Microsoft products, the schools are then more likely to continue to buy Microsoft products. How does this help limit the power of Microsoft?

Thank you for not helping Microsoft continue its monopolistic practices.
